

Hello Coach,

Thank you for getting the opportunity set up to go to Rockport. I will be forever effected by the experience. On my way home I felt like turning around and going back to Corpus to help Jim, Ray, Jim Bob, and Big Rich. I debating my next trip down to Houston and bring my son. He is a good young man and he graduates this year. He needs a swift kick in the pants before he goes to college to wake him up. I appreciate the men and Sarah in the "Q", all of you have been an inspiration to me. I feel like I know all of you since I went back and listened to all the podcasts on iTunes. I even took Larry up on his offer to go through his time that he set up on prayer. Listening to your podcast helped me make the decision to have my wife homeschool our 5 year old son. We have for the most part sent our kids to private Christian schools but they are not what they used to be when our older children went to school. My 8 year old daughter is currently enrolled in a private school but I am praying and considering taking her out and have my wife homeschool her also.

Today I listened to the Wednesday show and I felt I needed to share. When I was getting ready on early Saturday morning prior to driving down to Rockport the attacks started on not going. I am so glad that I went. I think that is one of the major problems with people they have good intentions to do something but they let the roadblocks get in the way. I think there is a saying "the road to hell is paved with good intentions". We have become a society of learned helplessness and the enemy has us right where they want us. I used to be concerned about being on the radar and etc. but I realized they already know who I am. The wake up call that everyone needs to realize is that if they are not out in the streets acting like a bunch of heathens then you are on a list of some sort. Even those guys are because look at what happened to the "brown shirts". So if you not in the game then the enemy has won. Thank you Coach for putting me in the game and helping break out of just wanting to sit on the bench. Tell Michelle I said hello she is such a sweetheart. God bless you and your family.
